

We are trying to create a very isolated flow of people where they don't cross paths and can stay distant.

If there were swing gates in the wooden wall as shown, we could easily have the people flow be like the red lines. Barriers could be placed between the rings, and exhibitors wouldn't be in the normal center aisle mingling.

The center aisle could be used for equipment staging - giving us the full 100x100 (minus stalls in JWW) ring size.

No crating indoors so there is plenty of room for people to stage before running and get out of the rain. Exits would be near the normal man doors on the N and S of the building.
